The Repertoire of the Practice of the Security Council and its supplements are published by the United Nations Secretariat as a guide to the proceedings of the Security Council from its first meeting in 1946 onward. The Repertoire is designed to assist government officials, practitioners of international law, academics and all those interested in the work of the United Nations to follow the evolving practice of the Council and gain a better understanding of the framework within which it operates. The publication presents, as comprehensively as possible, new trends in the Council's application of the Charter of the United Nations and its own provisional rules of procedure. The Repertoire is the only such official record and is based solely on the deliberations of the Council, its decisions and other official documentation before the Council.

The current Supplement, eighteenth in the series of Supplements to the Repertoire, covers the years 2012 and 2013. During the period, the Council's application of the Charter further evolved as it continued to address various challenges with regard to its responsibility to maintain international peace and security. In the light of growing ethnic and political rivalries in the Middle East and across Africa, the Council grappled with preserving international peace and security in the face of rapidly worsening humanitarian crises. In September 2013, the Council unanimously decided that the Government of the Syrian Arab Republic should destroy its chemical weapons arsenal. In December 2012, the United Nations Integrated Mission in Timor-Leste completed its mandate after the successful holding of national elections.
